

DRINK RUM BAN

Harvey C. Miller, Grain Man, Will Assist Federal Chief

for Drunkenness
Nearly One-half
With Bars Closed

LEGGING IS LESS

Fund Accounts and seals for Charity Likewise Affected

Any crime stumped sharply in this while the saloons were closed by the health authorities and for weeks and disorders conduct decreased considerably. In the month ended last night there were 1872 arrests for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Under Government control, the Clyde Steamship Line, Malony Steamship Line, Ocean Liner, and the Canadian Steamship Line, Southern Pacific Steamship Line and Southern Steamship are operated by one man, Mr. McAlister, who is managing in the Commercial Building, will be responsible for and in control of the operation of the bars. Mr. Miller is active in the management of the Keystone Elevator and the Company, and Meridian Warehouse Company; also the Keystone Company and Keystone Coal Co., all of which he is president.

FINAL LOAN FIGURES NOT YET TABULATED

Committee Still Awaits Returns of Several Nearby Communities

Failure to date of several communities in the Third Federal Reserve District to forward final returns of the fourth Liberty Loan to Washington, the city officials said, will delay for months the compilation to make public the official statement of total subscriptions.

The total for the district may be announced tomorrow, but it is explained that the effect of the epidemic of influenza on clerical forces engaged in the work of tabulation may have caused a weekly average for last September.

Ban a Benefit, Says Souder

The effects of the saloon ban are reflected not only in decreased arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, but in the number of arrests for other crimes.

"There is no benefit," commented Captain of Police J. M. Souder. "There is no question that it has considerably reduced the amount of petty crime. It even lessened the number of homicides. Intoxicated men were the most numerous cause of these arrests."

During the twenty-five days the ban was effective, Government authorities found the number of belligerent cases running below the average, and there was no increase in the use of narcotics.

According to Todd Daniel, superintendent of investigation for the Department of Justice, there was a marked decrease of belligerent cases.

Federal agents were forced while the ban continued, albeit, survivors of honor, he said, found it exceedingly difficult to get supplies, and because of their detection was rendered useless.

The narcotic division of the Internal Revenue Department declared there was no increase in the number of "dope" users here. While officials of the division pointed out that three weeks was not a short period on which to base very accurate figures, they did note that during that time users, deprived of alcohol did not turn to narcotics as a substitute.

Effect on Saving Banks

While the "dry" period was only of three weeks' duration, prohibition advocates nevertheless expected a substantial increase in the amount of saving deposits.

Opinion on that point was divided to-day among the bankers and saving fund officials. Not all deposits were slowed down because of the Labor Day Loan, which was paid out, while the epidemic and consequent bills for medical and other services required withdrawals from numerous accounts.

Beginning this week however, according to T. J. Beck, assistant treasurer of the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, deposits were very late in coming in.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus. The Society contributed much of the decrease to the epidemic. In many instances, he said, the sickness caused extraordinary demands on incomes and checked savings to a large extent.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus. The Society contributed much of the decrease to the epidemic. In many instances, he said, the sickness caused extraordinary demands on incomes and checked savings to a large extent.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The man on whom temporally wiped out the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Deposits at his institution fell away during the last three weeks, according to Ignatius J. Doherty, president of the Knights of Columbus, was a widow.

He said that the amount of deposits at that institution, in fact, increased during the third week of October. He refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Youngest Was 62 and All Succumbed Within Week

Three sisters, the youngest sixty-two, who died within a little more than a week, were Miss Mary Miller, seventy-six, and Miss Winifred Miller, sixty-five, all of 315 North Eleventh street.

The older sister died Saturday night. The second sister died the following Monday. They were buried last Thursday.

Friends and neighbors discovered the third sister's illness. She refused to see a physician sent by the police and died at 6 o'clock